I PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

The purpose of this zoning study is to review language in the zoning code requiring consent petitions for some nonconforming and conditional use permit applications that result in unnecessary hurdles to small-scale commercial and residential development and recommend amendments to address this. This study is one of 15 policy/implementation action priorities of the Planning Commission and helps implement 2040 Comprehensive Plan policies that support more housing, increased residential density, a mix of uses, and the opportunity for all residents to build wealth. The study proposes amendments to the required findings in the zoning code for nonconforming and conditional uses that require petitions.¹

Context

A consent petition is a prerequisite for some zoning applications. Planning staff works with applicants and would-be applicants who occasionally experience difficulty obtaining consent petitions. Among the reasons for this are nonresponsive and hard-to-contact property owners, nearby condominiums that significantly increase the number of signatures required on the petition, language barriers, concern about potential competition, and racist motivations to oppose legitimate projects. Consent petition requirements can slow a business trying to reoccupy a property when reestablishing a nonconforming use that has been vacant more than one year, including properties affected by the pandemic and civil unrest. Some reasonable and realistic proposals may never make their way to the Planning Commission because the petition requirement hurdle cannot be overcome. This situation may be encountered by applicants or would-be applicants in neighborhoods where a majority of the residents are Black, Indigenous, or people of color and/or neighborhoods with residents of moderate to low incomes. Acknowledgment of the history of this experience, and a way to address it, is reflected in one of the implementation items in the 2040 Comprehensive Plan: Systematically review and modify the Zoning Code to remove unnecessary hurdles to small-scale commercial and residential development.

II BACKGROUND INFORMATION

1. Nonconforming Use Permits

There are several types of zoning applications that require a consent petition for a complete application. These include applications for nonconforming use permits (to establish, reestablish, expand or relocate nonconforming uses) and for two types of conditional use permit applications (carriage house dwelling and reuse of large structures). The only type of nonconforming use permit application that does not require a consent petition to be submitted as part of a complete application is for a change of nonconforming use.

The number of nonconforming use permit applications each year since 2005 has ranged from a low of 6 and 7 in 2020 and 2021 respectively, to a high of 18 in both 2011 and 2012 (Table 1). As noted, most of these applications require a consent petition to make a complete application.

¹ Zoning applications in which State law requires petitions – i.e. rezoning from a residential district to a commercial/industrial district – are not included in the proposed amendments.

Tables 2 and 3 show the variety of nonconforming use permit applications submitted in 2020 and 2021. Many of the many of these applications across related to small-scale housing unit increases.

2. History of Petition Requirement for Nonconforming and Conditional Use Permits

The petition requirement for some nonconforming and conditional uses was added to the zoning code sometime between 1975 and 1986. Requiring petitions for nonconforming use permit and conditional use permit applications to allow a use not otherwise permitted in a zoning district was similar to the consent petition requirement in MN Stat. § 462.357, Subd. 5 for rezonings at that time. MN Stat. § 462.357, Subd. 5 now only requires a consent petition for rezoning from residential to commercial or industrial.

3. History of Petition Requirements to Rezone Property as a Context for Understanding Petition Requirements for Zoning Permit Applications

While this zoning study does not deal with the petition requirement for rezoning property, which is regulated by state statute, it is helpful to consider how the change in state statute regarding petition requirements for rezoning property removed a significant hurdle for applicants. Until the state statute regulating rezoning of property was changed in the early 2000s, all rezoning applications required a consent petition. After affordable housing advocates in the state pushed to make changes to the petition requirement, the petition requirement was eliminated, except for applications to rezone property from residential to commercial or industrial districts. Now, there are fewer hurdles to rezone property from one residential zoning district to another residential district, from a commercial or industrial zoning district to a residential district, or from a commercial or industrial district to another commercial or industrial district.

If the intent of the petition requirement is for nonconforming use permit and conditional use permit applications to be on similar footing as rezoning applications, then it may make sense not to require petitions for land use changes for residential uses in residential districts because rezoning to a residential district no longer requires a petition. Since rezoning from a residential to a commercial or industrial district requires a petition, it may make sense to require a petition for permit applications that propose a commercial or industrial use in a residential zoning district, where such uses could have more potential effect on nearby residential uses.

4. Petition Requirement Waived During the Pandemic

The petition requirement for nonconforming and conditional use permit applications is currently being waived by a series of mayoral emergency executive orders in response to the COVID-19 pandemic (extended to March 19, 2022 with the most recent order). The waiver has been in place for almost two years with no apparent problems, and has not resulted in a rush of applications to take advantage of the temporary waivers. In fact, from 2005-2021, 2020 and 2021 had the lowest number of nonconforming use permit applications. The temporary waiver has allowed nonconforming use permit applications that otherwise would have been much more difficult, such as one for a location next to a condominium with a large number of signatures needed on a petition. In that case, the applicant had worked with staff in the past to submit an application but never obtained a valid consent petition.

5. History of Amendments to the Nonconforming Use Chapter of the Zoning Code

The nonconforming use chapter of the zoning code was amended extensively in 2012 in response to changes at the state level requiring the city to update some of its language to comply with state requirements. Removal of the petition requirement for establishing and reestablishing nonconforming uses was considered by the Planning Commission at the time, but it was not included in the amendments that were adopted by the City Council. Internal staff discussions in 2012 raised questions about the petition requirement noting that obtaining signatures was becoming more difficult, especially because many properties were owned by financial institutions in other states. Since the petition requirement is a prerequisite to applying for nonconforming use permits to establish, reestablish, expand, or relocate uses, those wishing to use these properties were sometimes prevented from being able to make their case at a public hearing because they were not able to obtain a sufficient number of signatures on a petition. The minutes from the Planning Commission public hearing in 2012 are in Appendix A at the end of this memo and helpful in understanding the concerns about eliminating the petition requirement at that time.

III ANALYSIS

1. Applicants' and Would-be Applicants' Experience with Petitions

While there are no statistics on how many would-be applicants decide not to submit zoning applications due to the petition requirement itself, or due to the inability to obtain a sufficient petition, there is anecdotal evidence from experience that the petition requirement can be onerous and discourages applications. There may be a handful or so of such cases each year. Potential applicants sometimes talk with staff about projects that seem reasonable, but they cannot clear the petition hurdle. This can be an equity issue because sometimes the people the petition hurdle hinders, and who would therefore benefit from changes to the petition requirement, are people of color, immigrants with limited English proficiency, and people of limited means trying to provide housing or start a business to build wealth.

For those who are able to obtain a valid petition, the time it takes to satisfy this requirement often results in a delay in completing the project. Time costs money and affects entrepreneurs' interest and ability to open a business in Saint Paul. Below are various experiences shared by planning staff.

- Staff worked with an applicant trying to make a duplex legal when the applicant was unable to get a valid petition. The applicant almost lost the house in the process due to financing and compliance deadlines but was able to get the needed nonconforming use permit when they obtained a variance of the petition requirement from the Planning Commission.
- Staff worked with an immigrant applicant trying to open a small corner grocery store but the operator of a small grocery store owner across the street, who saw the proposed use as competition, would not sign the petition, contributing to the applicant's inability to obtain a valid petition. The would-be applicant in this case was not able to apply and have his proposal considered.
- Staff worked with an applicant needing a conditional use permit to reuse a large structure (fire house) for a commercial use. The use required a petition as part of the application. It took the applicant many months to obtain the necessary signatures, which delayed the project timeline.

- Staff has worked with applicants in situations where a very large number of signatures on a petition were required due to the proximity of the subject property to condominiums, sometimes with more than 60 signatures needed. In some instances, a variance of the petition requirement has been granted. In other cases, this hurdle led would-be applicants to abandon their plans.
- How much is a signature worth? Some applicants report they have been asked by potential signers of a petition to be paid for their signature.
- Staff worked with an applicant who experienced a situation where another property owner who wanted to purchase the land in question for their own use would not sign the petition for the proposed use of the property.

Below is a recent example of an email communication with a would-be applicant for a nonconforming use permit that summarizes the burden of petition requirements. The writer points out that though the project is only in the feasibility stage, they see signatures on a petition as a huge barrier. They go on to note that waiving the petition requirement by executive order due to the pandemic really lessens the burden to participate in a zoning process that still involves public notice and participation.

Good afternoon Luis,

James Williamette suggested I reach out to you to learn more about the Mayor's order suspending neighbor signatures for projects involving legally non-conforming uses that aim to obtain a permit to improve their properties.

Section 62.109 – Nonconforming use permits indicates that the need for “A notarized petition of at least two-thirds of the owners of the described parcels of real estate within one hundred (100) feet of the subject property has been submitted stating their support for the use. “

Can you please help me understand the suspension of this requirement or point me to the order for reference? Is it in effect only for a limited timeline or will it presumably be a permanent change to the zoning code?

Signatures for a project we are in the feasibility phase on to make a building accessible is a huge barrier to my client in the Historic Hill District, so this suspension order is great news. We do understand the Planning Commission process for approval of the project will be public and all these neighbors will be invited to attend and comment, but it really lessens the burden to participate in that process.

There have been instances over the years of the Planning Commission granting variances of the petition requirement, due to demonstrated hardships, in conjunction with a permit application like the one noted above, but this is the exception rather than the rule. The findings accompanying these variances typically cited the reasons provided in this study for the difficulty in obtaining signatures.

2. Reasons Applicants Have Difficulty Obtaining Signatures on a Petition

- a. Nonresponsive property owners who live out of town, out of state, or are financial institutions
- b. Owners not answering doors or responding to letters requesting signatures
- c. Condominiums with multiple owners that increase the number of signatures required
- d. Secured entrances in condominiums limit access into the building to be able to knock on doors and ask for signatures

- e. Language barriers
- f. Concern about competition from a new business
- g. Racist motivations may cause some owners to oppose legitimate projects and refuse to sign
- h. Determining who is eligible to sign for a corporation, trust, or estate can be challenging. The death of a property owner and subsequent settling of an estate can prolong the time it takes to obtain a signature from that party.

3. Rationale for Amending or Eliminating Petition Requirements

- a. Early notification of zoning applications is provided to district councils and subscribers to the ENS system (Early Notification System), per city policy. Planning staff encourages applicants to present their proposal to the district council and seek their support prior to submitting an application (although sometimes planning staff is not aware of an application until after it has been submitted).
- b. Notice of a public hearing is required to be given to property owners within 350 feet of the subject property. Owners then have an opportunity to participate and be heard during the public hearing process.
- c. The other required findings for the permit that are stated in the zoning code must still be met.
- d. Obtaining a valid petition is a hardship for some applicants for the reasons stated in this study.
- e. Petition requirements give disproportionate power to a limited number of property owners who are not elected.
- f. Obtaining a valid petition can take several months for some applicants, resulting in substantial delays in the zoning process and project completion. Time costs money and affects entrepreneurs' interest and ability to open a business in Saint Paul.
- g. Petition requirements may slow down the reestablishment of nonconforming uses that have been vacant for more than one year.
- h. Eliminating the petition requirement removes a hurdle to submitting an application. Eliminating the petition requirement does not guarantee approval of the request, it just gives an applicant the right to have the request considered by the Planning Commission. Staff often advises would-be applicants of a likely recommendation for denial, when it is warranted, before an application is submitted. This way, an applicant knows what they are getting into before committing time and money toward the effort.
- i. It is reasonable for applicants to be able to submit a proposal, ask for a public hearing, and for the Planning Commission to consider a proposal, after notice to area property owners. Eliminating the petition requirement does not eliminate the possibility that the city says no to a request after reasonable analysis and public hearing.
- j. May allow for a modest increase in residential density.
- k. May reduce burdens on businesses.
- l. May allow for more wealth building.

- m. People living and working near a subject property may be more potentially affected by a new use than non-local property owners and to that extent may be the ones to have a say on a proposal. For a petition, however, it would be challenging if not infeasible to determine which non-property owners live or work within 100 feet of the subject property since there is minimal or no documentation of area renters and workers the way there is for property owners.
- n. Concern about a possible taking by the city if reasonable use of the property is not allowed because a valid petition cannot be obtained. The provision in 62.109(e) for reestablishment of a nonconforming use is written for very narrow use -- only when "the structure, or structure and land in combination, cannot reasonably or economically be used for a conforming purpose." Zoning that prevents property from being reasonably or economically used is, essentially, the definition of a "taking," and courts could require the City to buy the property or pay damages to the property owner. Sec. 62.109(e) offers an option that allows the City to permit the reestablishment of a nonconforming use when the current zoning regulations would otherwise prevent the property from being reasonably or economically used, and thus avoids the legal liability of a taking.

If a structure cannot reasonably or economically be used for a conforming purpose, and the proposed use is consistent with comprehensive plan and not detrimental to the area, it may not be reasonable to require a petition in order for the Planning Commission to hold a public hearing and consider the merits of the case. While surrounding property owners may sign a consent petition for some nonconforming uses and not for others, petitions are often very difficult and time consuming to obtain for any use, especially when property owners are commercial enterprises located in other states and when language and cultural barriers are present. Owners of property within 350 feet are required to be notified of public hearings, and their testimony is considered in Planning Commission deliberations and decisions on what is best. If a petition requirement prevents the possibility of a public hearing, it may prevent reasonable and economical use of a building, and prevent the City from using the provisions in (e) for reestablishment of a nonconforming use as a way to avoid the legal liability of a taking.

4. Reasons Not to Amend or Eliminate Petition Requirements

While there are many reasons to consider amending or even eliminating the petition requirement, there are also reasons to consider retaining the petition requirements:

- a. Petition requirement provides area property owners with greater control over proposed land use changes nearby.
- b. If there is no petition requirement, the applicant is not compelled to get out in the neighborhood and talk to people about plans for the property and to "sell" the idea to them and receive community input before submitting an application. They may do it because it's good for their case, but they would not be required to do it.
- c. If the petition requirement is removed, applicants could sometimes spend time and money on proposals that have little chance of being approved, and neighbors might sometimes feel more compelled than otherwise to organize in opposition to such proposals.

5. Options for Amending the Petition Requirement

There are many ways the petition requirement in the zoning code could be amended to address the concerns raised in this study. A Planning Commissioner suggested several: 1) reduce the percentage of area property owners who need to sign a petition from two-thirds to lower the number of signatures needed; 2) require signatures only from owner-occupied properties in areas where there are many non-local owners; 3) allow current occupants to sign petitions as well as property owners.

Amending the petition requirement in these ways gets at reducing the number of signatures required and increasing the number of people eligible to sign a petition and this may make it easier and quicker for a potential applicant to produce a valid petition. But these suggestions do not address people who do not answer their doors and condominiums that can significantly increase the number of signatures needed, nor do they address concerns about competition, racist motivations to oppose a project, or language barriers. Also, compared to property owners, it would be difficult to certify or confirm that current occupants are eligible to sign a petition (i.e. confirming that current occupants are actually residents of an area property).

The consensus among planning staff is that the petition requirement for nonconforming and conditional use permits should be eliminated rather than amended. The proposed zoning code text amendments follow this section. There was discussion at the beginning of the zoning study about retaining the petition requirement for certain commercial, industrial, and large-scale uses that are more likely to have adverse effects on nearby residential uses. However, there are sufficient checks in place to encourage public participation in the zoning process with both ENS policy and the required (mailed) public hearing notice to property owners within 350 feet of the subject property. In addition, many district councils have formal processes to weigh in on zoning applications in their areas, in time for the Zoning Committee meeting. Elimination of the petition requirement does not automatically mean that a request will be approved, it only means that the proposal can be considered by the Planning Commission. If the required findings for the proposed use are not met, staff must recommend denial, and unreasonable proposals may be denied by the Planning Commission.

6. Department of Safety and Inspections Study of Petition Requirement

The Department of Safety and Inspections is considering changes to its petition requirement for certain license applications, citing many of the same issues noted in this zoning study, including residents not answering their doors and difficulty contacting owners of non-owner occupied properties. In addition, from an equity perspective, there is a concern about giving a disproportionate amount of power to a limited number of property owners who are not elected.

IV STAFF RECOMMENDATIONS

Staff recommends that the Comprehensive and Neighborhood Planning Committee recommend that the Planning Commission release the following draft zoning code text amendments for public review and set a public hearing for May 13, 2022.

V Proposed Zoning Code Text Amendments

The following draft text amendments eliminate the consent petition requirement for nonconforming uses and the two conditional uses that require petitions. There are also a couple of typos that are proposed to be corrected. NOTE: New language proposed for the zoning code is underlined and language proposed to be deleted from zoning code is ~~struck through~~.

- (a) Establishment of legal nonconforming status. The planning commission may grant legal nonconforming status to uses or structures that do not meet the standards for legal nonconforming status in section 62.102 if the commission makes the following findings:
- (1) The use or a nonconforming use of similar or greater intensity first permitted in the same zoning district or in a less restrictive zoning district has been in existence continuously for a period of at least ten (10) years prior to the date of the application;
 - (2) The off-street parking is adequate to serve the use;
 - (3) Hardship would result if the use were discontinued;
 - (4) Rezoning the property would result in "spot" zoning or a zoning inappropriate to surrounding land uses;
 - (5) The use will not be detrimental to the existing character of development in the immediate neighborhood or endanger the public health, safety, or general welfare;
and
 - (6) The use is consistent with the comprehensive plan; ~~and~~
 - ~~(7) A notarized petition of at least two-thirds of the owners of the described parcels of real estate within one hundred (100) feet of the subject property has been submitted stating their support for the use.~~

The application for the permit shall include ~~the petition~~, evidence of a ten-year period of existence, evidence that conversion of the use and structure would result in hardship, a site plan meeting the requirements of section 61.401, floor plans, and other information as required to substantiate the permit.

- (b) Nonconforming commercial and industrial parking use. The planning commission may grant legal nonconforming status to allow the use of land without completely enclosed buildings as a parking lot to serve abutting property in OS-B5 Business and ITR-I1 industrial districts if the commission makes the following findings:
- (1) The commercial or industrial parking lot has been paved, maintained and used for commercial or industrial parking for at least ten (10) consecutive years prior to the date of the application;

- (2) The parking lot occupies a legally subdivided parcel that is too small for development and has not been owned by a different adjoining property owner for at least ten (10) years prior to the date of the application;
- (3) The parking lot is to serve abutting commercially or industrially zoned property;
- (4) The parking lot will not be detrimental to the existing character of development in the immediate neighborhood or endanger the public health, safety, or general welfare;
and
- (5) The parking lot is consistent with the comprehensive plan;
~~and,~~
- ~~(6) A notarized petition of at least two-thirds of the owners of the described parcels of real estate within one hundred (100) feet of the subject property has been submitted stating their support for the parking lot.~~

The application for the permit shall include ~~the petition,~~ evidence of a ten-year period of existence, a site plan meeting the requirements of section 61.401, and other information as required to substantiate the permit.

- (d) Expansion or relocation of nonconforming use. The planning commission may permit the expansion or relocation of a legal nonconforming use if the commission makes the following findings:
 - (1) In residential districts, the expansion, or relocation will not result in an increase in the number of dwelling units;
 - (2) For expansion of a structure, the expansion will meet the yard, height and percentage of lot coverage requirements of the district;
 - (3) The appearance of the expansion or relocation will be compatible with the adjacent property and neighborhood;
 - (4) Off-street parking is provided for the expansion or relocation that meets the requirements of article 63.200 for new uses;
 - (5) Rezoning the property would result in a "spot" zoning or a zoning inappropriate to surrounding land use;
 - (6) After the expansion or relocation, the use will not result in an increase in noise, vibration, glare, dust, or smoke; be detrimental to the existing character of development in the immediate neighborhood; or endanger the public health, safety, or general welfare;
and
 - (7) The use is consistent with the comprehensive plan;
~~and~~
 - ~~(8) A notarized petition of at least two-thirds of the owners of the described parcels of real estate within one hundred (100) feet of the subject property has been submitted stating their support for the expansion or relocation.~~

The application for a permit shall include ~~the petition,~~ a site plan meeting the requirements of section 61.401, floor plans, and other information as required to substantiate the permit.

- (e) Reestablishment of nonconforming use. When a legal nonconforming use of a structure, or structure and land in combination, is discontinued or ceases to exist for a continuous period of more than one (1) year, the planning commission may permit the reestablishment of a nonconforming use if the commission makes the following findings:

- (1) The structure, or structure and land in combination, cannot reasonably or economically be used for a conforming purpose;
- (2) The proposed use is equally appropriate or more appropriate to the district than the previous legal nonconforming use;
- (3) The proposed use will not be detrimental to the existing character of development in the immediate neighborhood or endanger the public health, safety, or general welfare; and
- (4) The proposed use is consistent with the comprehensive plan; and
- ~~(5) A notarized petition of at least two-thirds of the owners of the described parcels of real estate within one hundred (100) feet of the subject property has been submitted stating their support for the use.~~

The application for the permit shall include ~~the petition~~, a site plan meeting the requirements of section 61.401, floor plans, and other information as required to substantiate the permit.

Sec. 65.121. Dwelling, carriage house.

An accessory dwelling in a combined residential and garage building, separate from the main building on the lot, located above and/or adjacent to the garage.

Development standards:

- (a) A carriage house building may be regulated as an accessory building or as an additional principal residential building.

Standards and conditions in residential districts:

- (b) The building planned for use as a carriage house dwelling had space originally built to house domestic employees.
- ~~(b) The applicant shall obtain a petition signed by two-thirds (2/3) of the property owners within one hundred (100) feet of the applicant's property line consenting to the carriage house dwelling.~~
- (c) A site plan and a building plan shall be submitted to the planning commission at the time of application.

Sec. 65.132. Reuse of large structures.

Conversion or reuse of residential structures of over nine thousand (9,000) square feet gross floor area and permitted nonresidential structures such as churches and schools.

Standards and conditions in residential districts:

- (a) The planning commission shall find that the structure cannot reasonably be used for a conforming use.
- (b) The planning commission shall find that the proposed use and plans are consistent with the comprehensive plan.

- (c) The planning commission shall find that the proposed use and structural alterations or additions are compatible with the surrounding neighborhood and land uses.
- (d) Applications for conversion or reuse shall include a notarized petition of two-thirds ($\frac{2}{3}$) of the property owners within one hundred (100) feet of the property proposed for the reuse, site plans, building elevations, and landscaping plans, and other information which ~~that~~ the planning commission may request. ~~The notarized petition requirement shall be waived for a proposed conversion or reuse to serve residents who are all considered handicapped under the Federal Fair Housing Act Amendments of 1988.~~

Chair Wencl read the rules of procedure for the public hearing.

The following people spoke.

1. Mr. Don Husband, a resident of Saint Paul for over 40 years. He spoke regarding proposed changes to the consent petition requirements, including the comments by PED staff. The process might be cumbersome, but this does not justify protecting the rights of the neighbors. Other changes could be put in place to possibly solve the problem. It is reasonable to assume that obtaining consent from the neighborhood would help and not hinder a developer. It would require them to work closely with the neighborhood from the beginning. The consent petition process should aid the developer in getting the Planning Commission approval. Without the consent process, the neighborhood loses control over the decision unless an appeal is made within an allowable period of time. Any zoning regulation will put a limit on the rights of an owner of property. Zoning regulations are based on the rights of the public to control unwanted or misconceived plans of another property owner. He recommends that the current consent process not be changed.
2. Mr. Jeff Roy, representing Summit Hill Association/District 16 Planning Council, reported that their Zoning & Land Use Committee held a public hearing on April 11, 2012. At the hearing there was strong concern about the impact and possible unintended consequences in the effort to identify options for changing the consent petition requirement for establishing and re-establishing nonconforming use permits. They feel that the current city zoning process requiring the petitioning of property owners within 100 feet of a site is necessary and appropriate. If the petitioning requirement was either eliminated or changed, the local community near the specific property/building would lose a valuable tool with respect to process. The Summit Hill Association and their Zoning & Land Use Committee recommends that there be no change for the re-establishment and establishment of a nonconforming use.
3. Mr. Al Oertwig, President of Payne Phalen District 5 Planning Council, stated that they have not taken a formal position on the proposed amendments. They see the importance of retaining the petition requirement. The petition process helps to surface vital information regarding local impact of proposed changes to a nonconforming use. They do not find the petition requirement burdensome, but rather a safeguard to sustainable development in their area.
4. Mr. Chuck Repke, representing District 2 Community Council, stated that on Wednesday their board voted to express the same concerns about the changes to nonconforming use regulations regarding the petitioning process. Mr. Repke stated that district council staff are there to help people get consent petitions. He is in front of the Planning Commission as many times to advocate for change as he is to oppose change, and he disagrees with the assumption that the power of neighbors to be able to sign the consent petition should be taken away because of the difficulties of some individual applicant in getting signatures when there is a network of organizations out there established to be able to facilitate those kind of communications. District Councils are a resource; direct applicants to the district councils, and they will be able to assist them. If the applicant can't get their neighbors to sign, then maybe it shouldn't happen.

Commissioner Schertler noted that community public bodies are charged to make decisions on these uses, and are required to meet due process standards. Commissioner Schertler's concern is that an individual is in effect making a regulatory decision by preventing the community from talking about it at a public hearing, and there is no due process check on the individual property owner to find out whether they are acting rationally or not.

Mr. Repke said that since the petition requirement is for uses that have already been discontinued for a year, it is a request for something beyond the regulation. So whatever be the motivation of the neighbor, it's already well beyond any rights of the new buyer of this property to protect themselves. The City shouldn't weaken the rights of those neighbors to assure that some how this nonconforming use goes away because of fear of the motives of some neighbor.

Commissioner Schertler said his concern went beyond the motives of a neighbor. If the decision has been made in a community body as opposed to an individual, there is at least some transparency in the process and some ability for people to come in and say, I signed the petition but I disagree with the change and I hope that this isn't allowed to happen. Isn't the City delegating some authority to consider land use decisions to individual property owners that happen to be within 100 feet as opposed to the community process to make the decision in front of everybody?

Mr. Repke reiterated that the petition requirement applies to nonconforming uses that have been gone for a year. These are nonconforming uses which the City's plans say shouldn't be there.

Commissioner Oliver said that the process has already been set up for this permit to be referred to the District Council for comment; it's going to come before the Zoning Committee for public hearing; and all of that then will come before the Planning Commission for a decision, and then the decision is appealable at City Council. Given all that process, why do we need to have a veto point early in the process, especially one that can be exercised by a minority of neighboring properties? If you have ten neighboring properties you need seven signatures; if you only get six signatures, then you can't even turn in your application. Given all the other opportunities to make voices heard and point out that a project doesn't fit and is bad and the neighborhood really wants the use to move on, why do we need to give that veto power in order for neighbors to have their voice heard?

Mr. Repke said that every one of these neighborhoods have neighborhood plans and the City already decided what it is they want the land uses to be in those areas. If a nonconforming use expires after a year, it's dead unless people are willing to say it is okay in this location and they sign the consent petition and move it forward.

Commissioner Nelson asked about vacant homes, foreclosures and banks that you can never get a hold of and that won't respond to any kind of letter. A very good nonconforming use that for some reason happens to go vacant for 366 day - a duplex that's always been a good duplex, was designed originally as a duplex with adequate parking, but then they just can't get the signatures because it's impossible to get a bank to sign a consent petition; it's impossible to find the absentee landlord. What should be done in those kinds of situations, where it seems like this nonconforming use really does make sense but you can't bring it in front of any kind of body because you can't get the adequate number of signatures required?

Mr. Repke said that his board's first comment would be, that's not our problem. The City may need to come up with some solution to deal with that, but it shouldn't take away the rights of all of these citizens in the City of Saint Paul to know what was going to happen to their neighboring property. This may be the situation on some rare blocks, but you're dealing with a small restricted area of current crises. There has to be some other way to deal with that.

Commissioner Spaulding said that one of the conditions of nonconforming use permits is that it be found consistent with the Comprehensive Plan. So technically they would have to find that still consistent with all the plans of the City that's been adopted as part of the Comprehensive Plan.

Mr. Repke agreed, but said that the City could make the argument that housing is a goal of the Comprehensive Plan and it is therefore consistent.

Commissioner Thao stated that market change is quicker than land use planning. How do we account for those situations?

Mr. Repke said he is testifying about taking away the signature requirement on a nonconforming use of a piece of property that's already stopped being what it is. It's dealing with specific pieces of property and not policy.

Chair Wencl asked about District 2's experience with applicants not being able to reach property owners.

Mr. Repke said in District 2 it just has not been a problem, There are limited blocks where you have lost four out of the ten homes that would be within 100 feet or three of the six homes that would be within the 100 feet, and, if it's that bad, then is that really the place where you want to be doing this?

MOTION: Commissioner Oliver moved to close the public hearing, leave the record open for written testimony until 4:30 p.m. on Monday, April 23, 2012, and to refer the matter back to the Neighborhood Planning Committee for review and recommendation. Commissioner Schertler seconded the motion. The motion carried unanimously on a voice vote.

In response to questions from Commissioner Noecker and Commissioner Edgerton, Patricia James, PED staff, explained that one of the two types of permits where the consent petition requirement is not proposed to change are those where the application is to enlarge a nonconforming use, which should have more neighborhood input. The other is for nonconforming parking lots, and there has never been an application for this type of permit, so there wasn't any experience on which to base a change. She also explained that the petition requirement is a local regulation and was not affected by the state law changes that are the reason for some of the other nonconforming use text amendments.
