Re: Update to Short Term Rental Zoning Study and Proposed Zoning Code Amendments

At the Planning Commission meeting on July 14, 2017 the Neighborhood Planning Committee's recommendation on the proposed amendments was before the Planning Commission for action. The Planning Commission voted to refer the item back to committee for clarification and discussion. Below is a discussion of the issues raised by Planning Commissioners at the July 14, 2017 meeting followed by the Neighborhood Planning Committee's recommendation. The full study memo and summary of public hearing testimony can be found on the project webpage or at stpaul.gov/planningcommission in the materials for the July 14, 2017 meeting.

Issue #1 Definition of family is confusing and needs clarification

Zoning Code Section 60.207 defines "family" as follows: One or two persons or parents, with their direct lineal descendants and adopted or legally cared for children (and including the domestic employees thereof) together with not more than two persons not so related, living together in the whole or part of a dwelling comprising a single housekeeping unit. Every additional group of four or fewer persons living in such housekeeping unit shall be considered a separate family for the purpose of this code.

The definition of family is used currently to determine the occupancy of all dwelling units in Saint Paul. It has been used since 1975 for the thousands of dwelling units in the city. Landlords and renters alike are able to understand and interpret the definition. The definition applies to the occupancy of owner – and renter - occupied homes and apartments. It is the standard used to determine occupancy for long term rental of dwelling units. To be consistent, staff recommends the definition of family be used to determine the occupancy of short term rental of dwelling units as well. Is there a compelling reason for short term rental to be treated differently? If occupancy limits for use of dwelling units in residential zoning districts for lodging (short term rental), a commercial use, is treated differently it should probably be more restrictive than the occupancy limit for long term rental.

While the definition of family is clumsy, it is the standard used to determine maximum occupancy for dwelling units. The proposed ordinance recommends using the definition of family to determine maximum dwelling unit occupancy for short term rental lodging just as it is already used to determine maximum occupancy for long term occupancy. A graphic to help short term rental hosts determine occupancy is attached at the end of this memo.

Alternative to the definition of family for Planning Commission to consider

If the definition of family is not used to determine occupancy of short term rental dwelling units, the definition of family (which allows up to four unrelated persons) could be used as a guide to determine a reasonable number of guests allowed in a short term rental dwelling unit.

The profile information provided by Airbnb about its guest and host activity in Saint Paul could also be used as a guide to determine a reasonable number of guests. This profile information was provided to the City on June 2, 2017 in Airbnb’s written comments on the proposed amendments during the public hearing period. The profile information states that the average group size is 2.1 people and that 96 percent of trips involve four or fewer guests.

Based on such guidance, the occupancy of “hosted” units could be limited to two guests and the occupancy of “non-hosted” units could be limited to four guests. This occupancy is in keeping with the profile information provided by Airbnb and would permit 96 percent of its stays in the City. The proposed ordinance provides for an opportunity to apply for a conditional use permit to allow more guests in large one and two-family homes on large lots for situations where it may be appropriate.

- Limit the number of guests in “hosted” situations to two

In a “hosted” situation, the dwelling unit may already be occupied by a family. The two short term guests would be in addition to the occupants of the residence.

- Limit the number of guests in “non-hosted” situations to four

Since the definition of family allows four or fewer unrelated individuals it may be fitting to limit the number of guests to four. The proposed ordinance provides for a conditional use permit to allow more guests in large one and two-family homes on large lots for situations where this may be appropriate.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: Use the definition of family to determine occupancy for short term rental dwelling units. It offers greater flexibility than permitting a fixed number of guests.

Issue #2 Consistency with bed and breakfast residence uses

“Short term rental dwelling unit” is a new use not currently listed in the zoning code. “Bed and breakfast residence” is an existing use listed in the zoning code.

The following characteristics differentiate bed and breakfast residences from short term rentals

Bed and Breakfast Residence	Short Term Rental Dwelling Unit
Owner or operator typically present during stay	Can involve home sharing or exclusive use of a residence so the owner or operator may or may not be present
A meal is provided in conjunction with the stay	Meals may not be offered in conjunction with a short term rental stay
Up to four guest rooms are permitted in a bed and breakfast residence depending upon the size and type of building (this could allow as many as eight guests assuming two guests per room)	Staff has recommended treating occupancy of long and short term rental uses consistently and generally limiting occupancy to a family or four or fewer unrelated individuals (with a provision for a conditional use permit to exceed this)
Permitted in one and two-family dwellings only	Allowed in many types of residential structures, not just one and two-family dwellings

Protecting the health and safety of guests, hosts, and neighbors is an important reason to regulate short term rentals. Leveling the playing field between bed and breakfast residences/hotels and short term rentals is another. The proposed zoning ordinance defines and permits the use. The proposed licensing provisions help to level the playing field by requiring short term rental operators to: 1) ensure the use is allowed by zoning; 2) have a license; 3) have a current certificate of occupancy for the unit; 4) collect applicable taxes; 5) maintain a lodging log; and 6) provide proof of insurance.

It may be a good idea to take a look at the bed and breakfast regulations in light of the introduction of short term rentals to the marketplace, but the Neighborhood Planning Committee does not recommend delaying adoption of the short term rental regulations for this purpose.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: No changes.

Issue #3 Multi-unit buildings are not addressed well

The intent of the proposed ordinance regarding multi-unit buildings is to prevent buildings from becoming quasi-hotels.

For large one-time events like the Super Bowl or Ryder Cup the City Council could approve an interim use permit to allow an exception to the limit on the number of short term rental dwelling units allowed in multi-unit buildings for a specified period of time before and after an event. This would loosen the restriction during one-time events and allow additional hosts to accommodate the temporary increased demand for lodging.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: No changes. The committee supports the idea of the City Council issuing interim use permits to allow exceptions to the standards and conditions for short term rental dwelling units for large one-time events.

Issue #4 Proposed ordinance is restrictive

Staff has noted that to date short term rental uses are not generating a lot of complaints. Consequently a draft ordinance was developed with a simple regulatory framework designed to permit the use and regulate to ensure the health, safety, and welfare of guests, hosts, and neighbors. Staff believes the proposed ordinance permits the use with few restrictions.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: No changes.

Issue #5 Impacts to housing availability and affordability

Maintaining housing availability and affordability are important for Saint Paul. We know from testimony and information from hosts that some units in the city have been converted to short term rental from long term rental. The proposed ordinance limits the number of units in multi-unit buildings to prevent conversions to quasi-hotels. Tourist-driven cities like New York, San Francisco, and New Orleans with very expensive housing markets have seen losses in housing availability and affordability as a result of conversions to short term rentals. Housing in Saint Paul is more affordable than in these cities and the year round tourism demand pressuring conversions to short term rentals is not so great. So, while availability and affordability are concerns for Saint Paul, the market here is different from other cities and the pressure to convert less strong at this time. Department of Safety and Inspections staff will track and monitor this with data and information from the online platforms. If short term rentals cause housing availability or affordability to become a problem the ordinance can be revisited to see how it might be amended to address concerns.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: No changes.

Issue #6 Why are short term rental dwelling units not allowed currently?

If a use is not listed in the zoning code as a permitted or conditional use it is not allowed. Short term rental dwelling units are a type of lodging, a commercial use, not currently listed in the zoning code.

Lodging uses listed in the zoning code are hotel, inn, motel, and bed and breakfast residence. The only one of these allowed in residential districts is a bed and breakfast residence, which is defined in the zoning code: A dwelling unit, located within a one- or two-family dwelling, in which guest rooms are rented on a nightly basis for periods of less than a week and where at least one (1) meal is offered in connection with the provision of sleeping accommodations only. If use of a dwelling unit does not meet this definition it is not a bed and breakfast residence.

Neighborhood Planning Committee Recommendation: Revise the study memo to remove the language referring to short term rentals as illegal and replace it with language referring to short term rentals as not permitted by the zoning code.

Recommendation for Planning Commission Action: The Neighborhood Planning Committee recommends approval of the following proposed amendments to Zoning Code §§ 65.641, 65.645, 66.221, 66.321, 66.421, 66.521, and 63.207.

NOTE: Existing language to be deleted is shown by ~~strikeout~~. New language to be added is shown by underlining. [Drafting notes are in brackets.] “P” refers to permitted uses and “C” refers to conditional uses.

Occupancy Limits for a Short Term Rental

The number of people allowed in a short term rental must comply with both of the following requirements:

Zoning Code Requirements

The Zoning Code limits the number of people allowed in any dwelling unit. The following tool is intended to assist you in understanding how many people are allowed. You may select up to 4 of the following boxes to reach the maximum number of people allowed. This maximum number includes both people living there as well as short term renters.

1 Adult with Kids:
1 Parent & their direct lineal descendants & adopted or legally cared for children (e.g. children [kids and adults], grandchildren, etc.)

Building Code Requirements

The building code limits the number of people allowed by setting minimal square footage requirements per person:

- Total required space in dwelling units – a minimum habitable gross floor area of at least one hundred fifty (150) feet for the first occupant, at least one hundred (100) square feet for the first occupant, at least one hundred (100) square feet for each occupant thereafter.
- Required space in legal sleeping rooms – a minimum gross floor area of at least seventy (70) square feet for the first occupant and for every room occupied for sleeping purposes by two (2) or more occupants shall have a minimum gross floor area of fifty (50) square feet per occupant thereof.
